DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Reuben Friend Farm lies on both sides of Fearer Rd. The main house is on the S side of the road, along with most of the outbuildings. The principal barn sits almost directly opposite the house, on the N side of the road.

The house is a plank-constructed, gable-roofed, ell-plan dwelling, measuring 3 bays across the front and one bay on the sides. The facade of the house points N. The ground slopes from NW to SE, making the foundation more visible at the SE corner.

The house rests on a rusticated concrete block foundation and is covered with white aluminum siding. The windows are all new one over one sashes, except for the two first floor windows on the S elevation of the ell, which are five panes across each. The roof is covered with asphalt shingles.

The ell has been filled in on the S and E sides with a projecting shed-roofed addition. At the basement level on the E side is a door, protected by a shed-roofed porch. On the facade (N elevation), the first floor has been enclosed by a glassed-in sun porch with a hipped roof and a central door. On the second floor, a central bay projects over the porch roof. This projection has a cross-gable roof.

The house has two chimneys: one interior at the center of the house, between the main block and the T addition, and one exterior at the ridgeline of the S elevation of the T.

The first floor of the interior has a four-room plan. In the main block, a central staircase is flanked on the W by a large living room and on the E by a smaller parlor. There is a wall between the staircase and the parlor. Behind the living room is a large kitchen, taking up all of the T addition, and to the E of the kitchen is a small "sun porch" (so called by the owners) which fills in the S and E sides of the T.

To the S & E of the main house are several outbuildings. To the E are two small sheds, covered with board and batten siding and currently used for storage. To the S of the house are a springhouse, a smaller dwelling house, a small privy, and a barn.

The springhouse is covered with vertical boards and has a gable roof, covered with asphalt shingles. Entrance is from either the N or the S side, on the W end of the building. The spring issues from a small trough on the inside of the W wall and flows E, under a wall which separates the storage area from the spring, and into a concrete trough. The springhouse is currently used for storage.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This house is an example of a common western Maryland type. Houses of this general configuration, a rectangular main block and rear kitchen wing, were constructed in Garrett County from the late nineteenth through the early twentieth centuries. According to the owners, the house was remodeled in 1950.

— G-II-A-128 Reuben Friend Farm

The smaller dwelling is situated to the SE of the springhouse. It is a gable-roofed, two-bay by one-bay building, covered with grey asphalt brick-patterned siding. The gable-end facade (N elevation) is sheltered by a hipped-roofed porch. The house has 3 over 1 sash windows on the S elevation, a one over one sash window on the E elevation, and a 2 over 2 sash window on the W elevation. On the facade, a 2 over 2 sash window is set W of center, and a door is set E of center. Between the door and the E corner is a small four-paned window.

Further S is a gable-roofed bank barn. The barn has a stone foundation and is covered with vertical boards. The roof is covered with tar paper.

Across Fearer Road from the house stand a gambrel-roofed barn and two smaller outbuildings. These are mainly used for sheltering animals and storing farm implements.
